So, you're published (or planning to be)
... HOW'S THAT WORKING FOR YOU?

Did you publish with a traditional publisher?

Did you publish with a small press?

Did you publish via a "pay to publish" company?

Did you do it on your own? Are you trying to figure ... which way to go?

The savvy author and author-to-be learns quickly that Timing, Control, Quality ... and yes, Money are all essential components to successful publishing. Amazon changed everything ... Today, a great majority of established authors and authors-to-be are "bypassing" traditional and taking some form of the Independent Publishing. Join DWPC member Judith Briles to learn in depth the latest tricks of the publishing trade, share experiences, and come away with tools to make a new publishing game plan for your next masterpiece.

DWPC & Molly Brown House Museum
Commemorate Int'l Women's Day

Thursday, March 7, 2019, 5:30 - 7:30 p.m.

Join us for an evening of conversation kicking off an exciting 2019 Salon Series, jointly sponsored by the Molly Brown House Museum and DWPC. Here we will explore the origins of International Women's Day (March 8th), which dates back to 1909 when thousands of American trade union women went on strike for better working conditions in New York's garment industry. This historical movement ties directly into the IWD 2019 campaign theme, #BalanceforBetter, which is a call for communities everywhere to explore the importance of gender balance in building a better world.

We'll convene at 5:30 at the historic Denver Woman's Press Clubhouse at 1325 Logan Street, where we'll enjoy refreshments and brief presentation on the inspiring working women's movement in the early 1900s, nationally and in Denver. Then we'll "march" over one block to the Molly Brown House Museum at 1340 Pennsylvania Street where we'll learn about Margaret Brown's vision for women's equality and continue the lively discussion.

Free and open to the public, with RSVP: IWD Salon Registration

DWPC Members - Did you go to CU Boulder?

DWPC will be hosting our annual "Dinner with 12 Buffs" event, Friday, April 12, 2019. If you are a CU alumni, do let us know if you'd like to come, and/or wish to help plan the dinner.

This is an opportunity for us to introduce ourselves and connect with recent CU grads who are launching careers in writing, communications, or other exciting fields. For more information, please contact Buffy Gilfoil - 303-204-7862, proedit@aol.com, or Helen Masterson - 303-467-9680, helen@questguidepublications.com

Ralphie thanks you.
